THE CITY OF DREAMS

THIS IS KK NEW CITY

This was among the key objectives we had set for ourselves as we began designing the city. Sustainability was critical to achieve this. It had to be able to use resources wisely, and provide a lifestyle to our citizens that would continue to be benchmarks for the cities of tomorrow. The city had to be able to peer through the oncoming change, and be able to welcome it with open arms.

Spatial relationships, culture, history, were discussions that went into the making of the masterplan. What we arrived at after a journey of four long years was a city of eight precincts, with a seamless mix of the finest residential spaces, office towers, hotels, public realms, parks – which cover nearly 70 percent of the development, a centre for performing arts and more, supported by modern schools, state-of-the-art hospitals and efficient transport links to provide a complete environment for better living.
